

I am writing to address the issue of the FCC considering possible changes in the way FM radio is heard, i.e. Low Power FM (LPFM) taking priority over current FM translator services. This is a concern because I listing to Airl FM Radio on a daily basis for several hours a day. Not only is it convenient, but this radio station brings positive music and information into our community. It's very easy to find other types of music on the radio, EXCEPT positive Christian music. So to remove a radio station like Airl FM would be a detriment to the community. It is not as though there are several other similar stations available to listen to; Airl FM is often the ONLY provider of positive, CONTEMPORARY Christian music. In addition, Airl Radio services the community and the world. They have both local and world-wide outreaches and community service projects. In this day and age where it is more accepted to say cuss words over the airways than to say "Jesus", I am concerned that the FCC would under estimate the seriousness of this type of issue. We've entrusted the FCC to make decisions that are in the best interest of all listeners and to monitor what goes over our airways. I would implore the FCC to not allow LPFM stations to take priority over current FM translator services to show that the FCC is acting in the best interest of the listening community. Please do what is necessary to keep Airl FM and other FM translators in operation. Thank you for your time and consideration.
